SHOWER GIVES RELIEF FROM TORRID HEAT

Brings the Mercury Down, but Weather Man Says Relief Is Only Temporary.

Yes; it's cooler, and likely to stay cooler for a day or two. But that doesn't mean that summer has run a little to-day with occasional showers and squeezed out five one-hundredths of an inch of water before it stopped. It was a fine little shower. Breeze, faint S. E. at 7 o'clock, suddenly began to freshen and rolled in banks of mist, in what our Maine neighbors call a "sea turn." The sun hid his face. Drop by drop the rain pelted the mercury in the tube till it registered 72 degrees—a fall of 6 degrees from its summery 78 at the same hour of yesterday. "But the relief is only temporary," said the weather man this afternoon.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BLOUSE

Original Home Dressmaking Designs By The Evening World's Fashion Expert

The Manly Separate Blouse With Its Cuffs and Collar Has Been Feminised and Made Sightly Part of the Toilette - Both Its Lines and Materials Softened.

Copyright, 1918, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening World.)

The introduction of the separate blouse into feminine society came almost simultaneously with the womweather man says we are to be cooled an's tailor suit. At first they were manly affairs evolved to go with the like the one that began at 7.28 A. M. severely plain suits. Starched and stiff yokes, stick-up collars and attached cuffs were their characteristics. They were always of some fig." ured material or colored gingham, as white was considered a bit too shirt-

Gradually, however, they were feminized and softened, the collars came off and were replaced by stocks of ribbon or embroidery and the cuffs were made undetachable, without the links. Soon they were made of frivolous materials such as allk and lace, but it was for some time still considered an "undess" garment.

"We shall have more humidity before the day is over. The thermometer may climb as high as 83 or 84 degrees before mid-afternoon."

William Blake, thirty-six years old of No. 321 Hudson Street, died this stripming a sudden the idea of using it as a means of smartening a tailor suit for formal wear occurred. It was the natural accompaniment of the evolution of the suit, which began to assume a dressier effect by its cut and material, and by braid or fur tripming.

William Blake, thirty-six years old, of No. 331 Hudson Street, died this morning in Believue Hospital as a result of the effects of the heat. The man fell unconscious near his home and was taken to the hospital.

Womankind went rather mad about the blouse for a time, and bright-colored decollets evening waists were often seen with black velvet or silk skirts. Such a break at the waist-line was most unkind, however, to most figures, and as soon as women realized this they adopted the one-color scheme of a blouse in harmony with the skirt. This was found so practical and convenient that it has not disappeared yet. The washable blouse too has gone through its own various phases, until now it is as frilly and dainty and distinctive as the most fastidious could desire.

This year they are made of organdy, batiste and fine linen for wear with smart sport skirts. The open neck is the most popular and becoming, and the collars usually broad and pretentious.

The two models I am showing are significant of the mode, but distinctly individual. The one at the left might be made of white batiste on kimon lines with sleeves open and flaring below the elbow. Narrow Valenciennes insertion trims it in a way to suggest a yoke across the front and back and over the top of the arm. Then, so as not to detract from the breadth of the collar or the width of the sieeve, the insertion is placed on the very edge of them. A tiny lace edging to match gives a pleasing suggestion of suppressed frilliness. A
